Principal's Message

Reports

Student reports will go home this Thursday. Opportunity will be provided for teacher, parent, student interviews early next term. I will be working on conducting a student lead information evening for early in term 3.

End of term

Thank you to our staff (Michelle, Donna, Jeff G....), parents and community for your wonderful support for the school during the first half of 2019. The students have worked really hard and deserve congratulations on their excellent academic progress through the year. We look forward to continuing the momentum for the second half of the year. Have a happy and healthy holiday!

Top Paddock meeting

On Tuesday the Top Paddock schools teachers met together for a professional development/planning day. During term 2 all schools worked on activities to improve our students' use of vocabulary in their writing. Teachers moderated student writing together and have planned for further joint work with our students in Writing in term 3. All schools are increasingly linking in with each other's classes through virtual technologies eg. Webex. The cluster has also purchased a video sensor camera that will be used to video classroom teaching. This helps teachers to improve the quality and effectiveness of their teaching.

LOTE

During term 2, I taught LOTE in Kerang PS on a fortnightly afternoon basis. This provided Kerang with an opportunity for their students to experience another language and culture. Kerang PS are charged for the hours. This payment goes towards covering our staffing deficit. In term 3, I will be assisting Ultima with their LOTE. I will also be visiting Temy for a day in September to run a program there.

In term 3, we will be conducting an Indonesian Cultural Day at Lake Charm. Leitchville and Kerang PS will be attending.

Flag pole

Thanks Mr.G for your work bracing the flagpole.

What is your child's love language?

How does your child connect best to you? What is the gold in your relationship?

As the school holidays approach many families, parents, carers and children alike often look forward to some welcome down time and a break from school and childcare routines.

With a bit more time around our children perhaps this is a great opportunity to think about why it's important to actually and purposefully connect with our children. We can all live in the same house, share meals and activities, but the hustle and bustle of life can sweep us up in the 'doing' when it's the 'connecting' with our children that they value most and this includes teenagers too!

The 5 love languages can best be summed up as a way of supporting you to find the gold in the relationship with your children. All the elements are important, however there is usually one in particular that will strike a chord with your child and support them to feel understood and close to you. Perhaps consider your own love language. By knowing this about people close to us it can help us understand what makes them tick. Acknowledgement to author Dr. Gary Chapman.

It's quite possible that all your children may have different love languages, which is fine.

Words: In communicating love, words are powerful. Words of affection and | endearment, words of praise and encouragement, words that give positive guidance all say, "I care about you."

Gifts: The giving and receiving of gifts can be a powerful expression of love, at the time they are given and often extending into later years

Touch: Hugs and kisses are the most common way of speaking this love language, they may love reading snuggled up to you or enjoy a play wrestle

Time: Quality time is focused attention. It means giving your child your undivided attention. Quality time is a parent's gift of presence to a child, they may join in your activities just to be around you, gardening, walking, and talking together

Acts: If this is your child's primary love language, they will ask you to do something for them or they may like to do things for others as an act of kindness.
